Soup is a primarily liquid food, generally served warm or hot (but may be cool or cold), that is made by combining ingredients of meat or vegetables with stock, milk, or water. Hot soups are additionally characterized by boiling solid ingredients in liquids in a pot until the flavors are extracted, forming a broth. Soups are similar to stews, and in some cases there may not be a clear distinction between the two; however, soups generally have more liquid (broth) than stews.

Many species of fish are caught by humans and consumed as food in virtually all regions around the world. Fish has been an important dietary source of protein and other nutrients throughout human history. The United States Department of Health has a special advisory for food preparation tips for fish and other animals. See also the links on the other languages page. As fisherman and processors are subject to safety and health regulations, fish may include the usual cautions such as washing, marinating, and cooking them. Please see the links on the other pages for more information.
